Diabetic Retinopathy

Another vision affecting condition is an offshoot, or complication, of diabetes. Although it occurs more frequently with type 1 diabetes, it can also affect type 2 diabetics. If you have diabetic retinopathy, your vision can start to become cloudy from high blood sugar level damag to the retina

Eye breaks. Rest your eyes every 20-30 minutes of computer work. Look away at a dark field, or close your eyes, covering them with your hands to create a dark, restful field for them. Doing quick eye exercises (see Chapter Two, The Best Eye Activities) can help revive tired eyes as well.

Blink. As noted above, automatic blinking slows down while working at a computer screen. Remember to "manually" blink every now and then to keep your eyes from drying out.

- Vitamin C, Vitamin E, Beta carotene, Lutien, Zeaxanthin, Zinc oxide and Copper

Subsequently, another similar study was then done to detail the degree of improvemen he lens of the eye after treatment of cataracts with these drops. Again, 90% of participants howed significant improvement in visual acuity.

Often, there are no symptoms of early diabetic retinopathy. Yet, they can include the lowing:

- Seeing spots or floaters in your field of vision
- Blurred vision
- A dark spot in the center of your vision

Wash hands frequently.

Never touch dirty hands up around your eyes.

- If you wear contact lenses, practice good hygiene by cleaning them frequently and also cleaning their storage cases with hot water and a detergent and rinsing carefully.
- Don't share pillows or towels with someone who has an eye infection, especially pinkeye. It can spread rapidly.
- Don't sleep in contact lenses. Even though some manufacturers say it's okay to sleep in them, this is more for falling asleep for an hour or so while traveling. It shouldn't be done on a regular basis, 8 hours every night. To do so invites the risk of infection and injury.

Good hygiene. You may be surprised to know how many vision-affecting eye infections occur every day in the United States just from people not washing their hands. You carry bacteria, fungus and viruses on your hands and under your fingernails. All day long you touch your hands to your face and up around your eyes. If you don't wash your hands frequently, or if you don't wear gloves, the chances are pretty high that, sooner or later, you're going to rub something into your eyes that could cause a severe infection. Get into the habit of washing your hands frequently at work.

Before I tell you all about how to protect your vision, I'd like to just give you a basic understanding of the key parts of your eyes that are most involved in vision loss and about the valuable role each of these structures play in your vision.

Eye Structure and Its Role in Your Vision

- Sclera. The "white" part of your eye. The sclera helps maintain the shape and structure of your eye as well as its fluid balance.

- Cornea. The transparent front part of the sclera helps take light into the eye. It then refracts, or bends, light to help direct it to the lens and create focus.

- Iris. This is the "color" part of your eye — blue, hazel, brown — that helps your eye respond to light intake.

- Pupil. That little dark circle in the middle of your colored iris is the pupil. It reacts to light b opening wider in dark and closing down in bright light.

- Lens. The lens of your eye is much like the lens of a camera. In fact, that's how camera lense were originally created, after a human eye lens. Light enters your eye through your pupil an passes into the lens where it is refracted and focused onto the retina.[1]

- Conjunctiva. If you pull your eyelid down, those pink tissues that line the inner eyelid are your conjunctivae. These are the tissues that can become infected with bacteria and viruses and cause conjunctivitis , or "pinkeye" – a painful inflammation/redness of these tissues.

- Vitreous/Aqueous Humors. The two humors are the jelly-like fluid layers at the inner, bac and front parts of your eye that provide cushioning around your eye structure. The fluid la at the front of the eye is the aqueous humor and the one at the back is the vitreous humor.

- Choroid. This eye part lies between the sclera and the retina and provides nourishment t the outer layers of the retina through its blood vessels.

- Optic nerve. This structure transmits visual images from your retina to your brain. Your brain then interprets these images.

A Special Note... 4-3-14

HENRY FROBERG

Dear Frances, HICKS

First I want to thank you for the Kilmark/Smith information you sent me. I will keep it for my family.

Next I am sorry I came up with zero information with your uncle, Henry Oliver Froberg.

I contacted my cousins – Gordon Wilson and Loren Wilson in St. Joseph, Mi. Their mother, Iva, was very close to all the Smith relatives. However they never heard of Henry Oliver Froberg. I called my brother, Wayne Kilmark, in Georgia + the same goes with him & I. We never heard of your uncle. All of us heard of Ray Hicks – but none of us had met him either.

Gordon's wife Nancy did call a 93 yr old lady, Irene Fellner, but she did not recoll him either. Wayne suggested you check obit's & web sites to find him. But I imagine you have already. Good luck selling your place. I'm sure it will sell. I hope the weather improves when you come back here. Best Wishes always,

Lois Arent
